

About Page

Frog College

Spunky, silly, and scientifically enhanced, our main guy Frog had just enough smarts to make it into college. But does he have the guts to make it through?

Frog was once just a regular fly (eating) guy, until a scientist picked him for some intelligence-enhancing experiments. Now he's so smart that he's going to college! His acceptance made headlines, but by move-in day, the people have moved on. Now he's on his own at a new school, making new friends with a new species.

He's got great friends, wise mentors, a super smart Frog Mom, and a soda corporation mysteriously funding his education. Sure, he's a Frog. But he's also just a normal college guy: watching out for hangovers, failed midterms, and predatory birds.

Cast and Crew

Katherine Gorham

Creator/Head Writer/Treehugger Girl

Katherine Gorham is a NYC-based writer, performer, and choreographer with a BA in Theater from an alright school. Frog College is her first and favorite actualized series. She continues her study of comedy and screenwriting in NYC, while working as a choreographer and freelance copywriter. She also teaches ballet to babies in TriBeCa, which, unfortunately, is what she is best at. She's thrilled to share Frog College with the world.

Chris Matos

Editor/Frog

Christopher Matos is a director/writer/producer/actor/editor, born, raised, and residing in New York City. He loves all aspects of production and all avenues of storytelling. He has produced short films with MOVE Collaborative and theatrical plays with You Up Productions. In his free time he plays with cats he is allergic to, edits videos as a freelancer, and is always looking for great new people to collaborate with.

Meghan Ames

Sound Designer/Amelia

Meghan is a performer and entertainer currently residing in Etampes, France where she studies movement based performance and clown. When she is not entertaining families at the Long Island Children's Museum Theater, she trains in circus arts including tissu, hammock, and acrobalance: completely useless for a podcast. She continues to study, perform, and develop new work in NY and internationally. Keep an eye out for her artistic website which will include details on these new projects.

Dan Chaffkin

Sound Designer/Roommate

Dan Chaffkin is a comedy and math person. He likes doing stand up and improv and making videos. He has been told that he would have a great singing voice if he took some lessons. Dan is a black sash in Shoalin Kung-Fu, and he is developing a fundamental theory of comedy using first-order predicate calculus. He has also been known to make himself laugh for twenty minutes by spelling out "fart" three times in a game of Bananagrams.

Sam Kellman
Professor

Mike Flandrau
Scientist

Sara Neil
Frog Mom